

Once upon a frog, two frogs to be exact, one frog was named Franny, short for Francesca, the other was named Freddy, short for Fredrick. They live in Leap Pad Pond in a leap pad house. It is nice there from what I can tell. You might think it gets cold in there, but it really gets hot. It gets hot because there is a heater on the bottom of the leap pad!

Both frogs wanted to be famous but the problem was they were too tiny. They were African dwarf frogs. One day, Franny tells Freddy that she wants to be a pop star. Freddy says that nobody will be able to hear her because she's too small and her voice is too soft. Franny says she will prove that she can do it. Freddy says he wants to be a football player because he is fast. Franny tells Freddy that he cannot play football because he will get squashed. He says he will prove he can play football.

Now before you say there's no way an African dwarf frog can be a pop star or a football player, I'll tell you how. Franny made a microphone out of a very special kind of leap pad. It could carry sound as far as forever. Franny croaked out the song, "Living on a Leap Pad" at her first concert which instantly became a hit in Leap Pad Pond.

Freddy put together a frog football team. The football was much smaller than a real one and his jersey was made of a special kind of leap pad as strong as steel. Freddy's football team was undefeated and made it to the playoffs.

At the championship game, everyone was there and at half time Franny sang to the crowd. If you're wondering if Freddy won his football championship, he did. He won by 1 point at the very last second. After that, they had a big party with their family and ate fly ice cream and they all lived happily ever after. And that's the leap pad truth!
